The present volume is part of a series of sectoral studies on the evolution of concentration in the member states of the European Community.

These reports were compiled by the different national Institutes and experts, engaged by the Commission to effect the study programme in question.

Regarding the specific and general interest of these reports and the responsibility taken by the Commission with regard to the European Parliament, they are published wholly in the original version.

The Commission refrains from commenting, only stating that the responsibility for the data and opinions appearing in the reports, rests solely with the Institute or the expert who is the author.

Other reports on the sectoral programme will be published by the Commission as soon as they are received.

The Commission will also publish a series of documents and tables of syntheses, allowing for international comparisons on the evolution of concentration in the different member states of the Community.

1. INTRODUCTION

- 1.1 This report is one of a series of sectoral studies on the evaluation of concentration in the member states of the European Economic Community. The present study deals with the classical records sector of the record industry in the Republic of Ireland.
- 1.2 The report has been prepared by Mr. Frank Cunnane and Mr. P.N. Meenan, and the associated research has been performed by Mr. Frank Cunnane, Mr. P.N. Meenan and Mr. G.W. Connolly, all of MLH Consultants Ltd.
- 1.3 The study was undertaken in the period October 20, 1978 and November 20, 1978 and interim data on price structure and resume of initial findings were submitted in December 1978.
- 1.4 The final report was completed in January 1979.
- 1.5 The purpose of the study was to identify and report on retail prices of a pre-selected range of works by indicating:
- (a) the name of the conductor and/or the soloist, along with that of the orchestra;
 - (b) the recording date and country;
 - (c) the country and date of production;
 - (d) the country and date of publication.

An attempt has also been made to assess the size and structure of the market in Ireland for classical records.

- 1.6 It should be noted that no specific catalogue of works available exists for the Irish market. Instead regular use is made of the UK catalogue.

2. METHODOLOGY

2.1 The process used was the development and issue of a questionnaire supported by visits and interviews with trade sources, including a record processor, distributors, the International Federation Phonographic Institute (Ireland) and the Mechanical Copyright Protection Society Ltd. Discussions also took place with leading retailers and a total of 15 retail outlets were contacted in the following centres:

Dublin - 12

Cork - 3

The outlets selected included classical records in their stock of record merchandise, and some outlets specialised only in classical works. A list of retail outlets concerned is included in Appendix II.

2.2 A major impediment in preparing this report was the lack of published data. This resulted in a reliance on interview data. While this method may lack some desirable quantitative precision, it provided some insight into attitudes and perceptions of trends and competitiveness in the industry.

2.3 The industry itself lacks precise data on the actual value of the classical records sector and there are no published sales statistics. This became evident during the course of the survey as distributors could only indicate, in general terms, the value of the sector as being not in excess of 5 per cent of the total record market.

2.4 A possible distortion in the price survey, which showed a restricted level of choice to the customer, may have been caused by the fact that the survey was conducted prior to the arrival of Christmas stock, which according to trade sources is usually sufficient to last for five weeks, and is normally delivered to the outlets around November 20.

2.5 The lack of published data has had a major impact on the analysis of concentration in the industry in the period 1970/78, since base line data was even more difficult to obtain than current information.

3. SUMMARY OF FINDINGS

3.1 The market for records is worth about £10 million at retail selling prices.

3.2 The classical records market is worth approximately £500,000 at retail selling prices.

3.3 Classical records are not manufactured in Ireland, although there is an industry manufacturing popular and folk music records.

3.4 Value added tax on records is 40 per cent.

3.5 The high value added tax rate appears to be inhibiting growth.

3.6 The labels most commonly available are (in alphabetical order):

CBS

Decca

Deutsche Grammophon*

EMI

3.7 There are 250 retail outlets of which less than one dozen specialise in classical records. There are 85 outlets in Dublin.

3.8 Imports of all records in 1978 (to end of November) amounted to £1,523,066. There is no breakdown for classical records.

*hereafter referred to as DGG

4. COMMENTS ON THE PRICE STUDY

- 4.1 Of the 60 works listed in the survey (see Appendix I), only one, Mozart, Piano Concerto No. 10, was not available in any of the retail outlets visited.
- 4.2 The records and labels included in the study are set out in Table 1.
- 4.3 The level of price variance between outlets was not dramatically high, being within the range of 5 per cent and 10 per cent.
- 4.4 Alternative choices of some works were not in stock but were due for delivery in the pre-Christmas period.

5. GENERAL MARKET INFORMATION

5.1 Population

5.1.1 The population of the Republic is 3,192,000 with over half living in the province of Leinster. There are four provinces - Leinster, Munster, Connaught and part of Ulster, comprising three counties. The population breakdown in percentage terms is approximately as follows:

Leinster	50%
Munster	30%
Connaught/Ulster (3 counties)	20%

5.1.2 The Irish are basically a farming community. One city, Dublin, has a population in excess of 750,000. More than half the people live either on the land or in towns with a population of less than 3,500. Emigration, until recent times a traditional outlet for a proportion of the population, has eased.

5.1.3 Many Irish people are now moving to industry which has grown considerably over the past fifteen years as the result of policies implemented by successive governments. This has been accompanied by a trend of migration from the North/West and rural areas to the East and urban regions. In the period 1966/71, for example, Dublin County, excluding Dublin borough and Dun Laoghaire, showed a gross population increase of over 33 per cent due to the ongoing degree of industrial activity which is concentrated in the region.

5.1.4 Successive governments pursued industrialisation programmes designed to attract foreign enterprise to the country. There is a ready availability of Irish labour.

5.1.5 Ireland has a large youth population, with nearly 47 per cent under 35 years of age. The drop in emigration has increased the proportion of young people in the country. By 1986 the number of people under 25 could rise to more than 50 per cent of the population.

5.2 Households

- 5.2.1 There are 802,000 households in the Republic. Irish households tend to be large in size, the average number of people per house being four and almost one-third of the homes having five or more people in them.
- 5.2.2 The pattern of home ownership is set out in Table 2.

5.4 National Income 1976

5.4.1 The information of relevance in this section is seen in Table 4.

5.4.2 According to the National Household Budget Survey the average weekly expenditure per household on all records in the period 1973/76 (latest available data) was as set out in Table 5. Please note that the expenditure refers to a sample comprising 2,000 households in urban areas.

6. MANUFACTURING

6.1 Classical records are not manufactured in the Republic of Ireland, but some manufacturing of other records is undertaken to a limited extent and comprises two categories:

for the domestic market

for export markets

6.2 Domestic Market

6.2.1 Trade sources indicate that the record industry in Ireland has experienced rapid growth and most records have been imported direct by companies which are either subsidiaries of multi-nationals or locally based importers/distributors of internationally known brands. The pattern of imports in 1970/78 period are set out in Table 6. A full breakdown of these can be seen in Appendix III.

6.2.2 There are two manufacturing plants which process non-classical records for local distribution. These are operated by Carlton Productions Ltd. and EMI (Ireland) Ltd. In many instances they both would process labels other than their own, provided there is a minimum of 1,000 pressings.

6.2.3 It is understood that the combined manufactured output of the companies in question is valued at approximately £4 million.

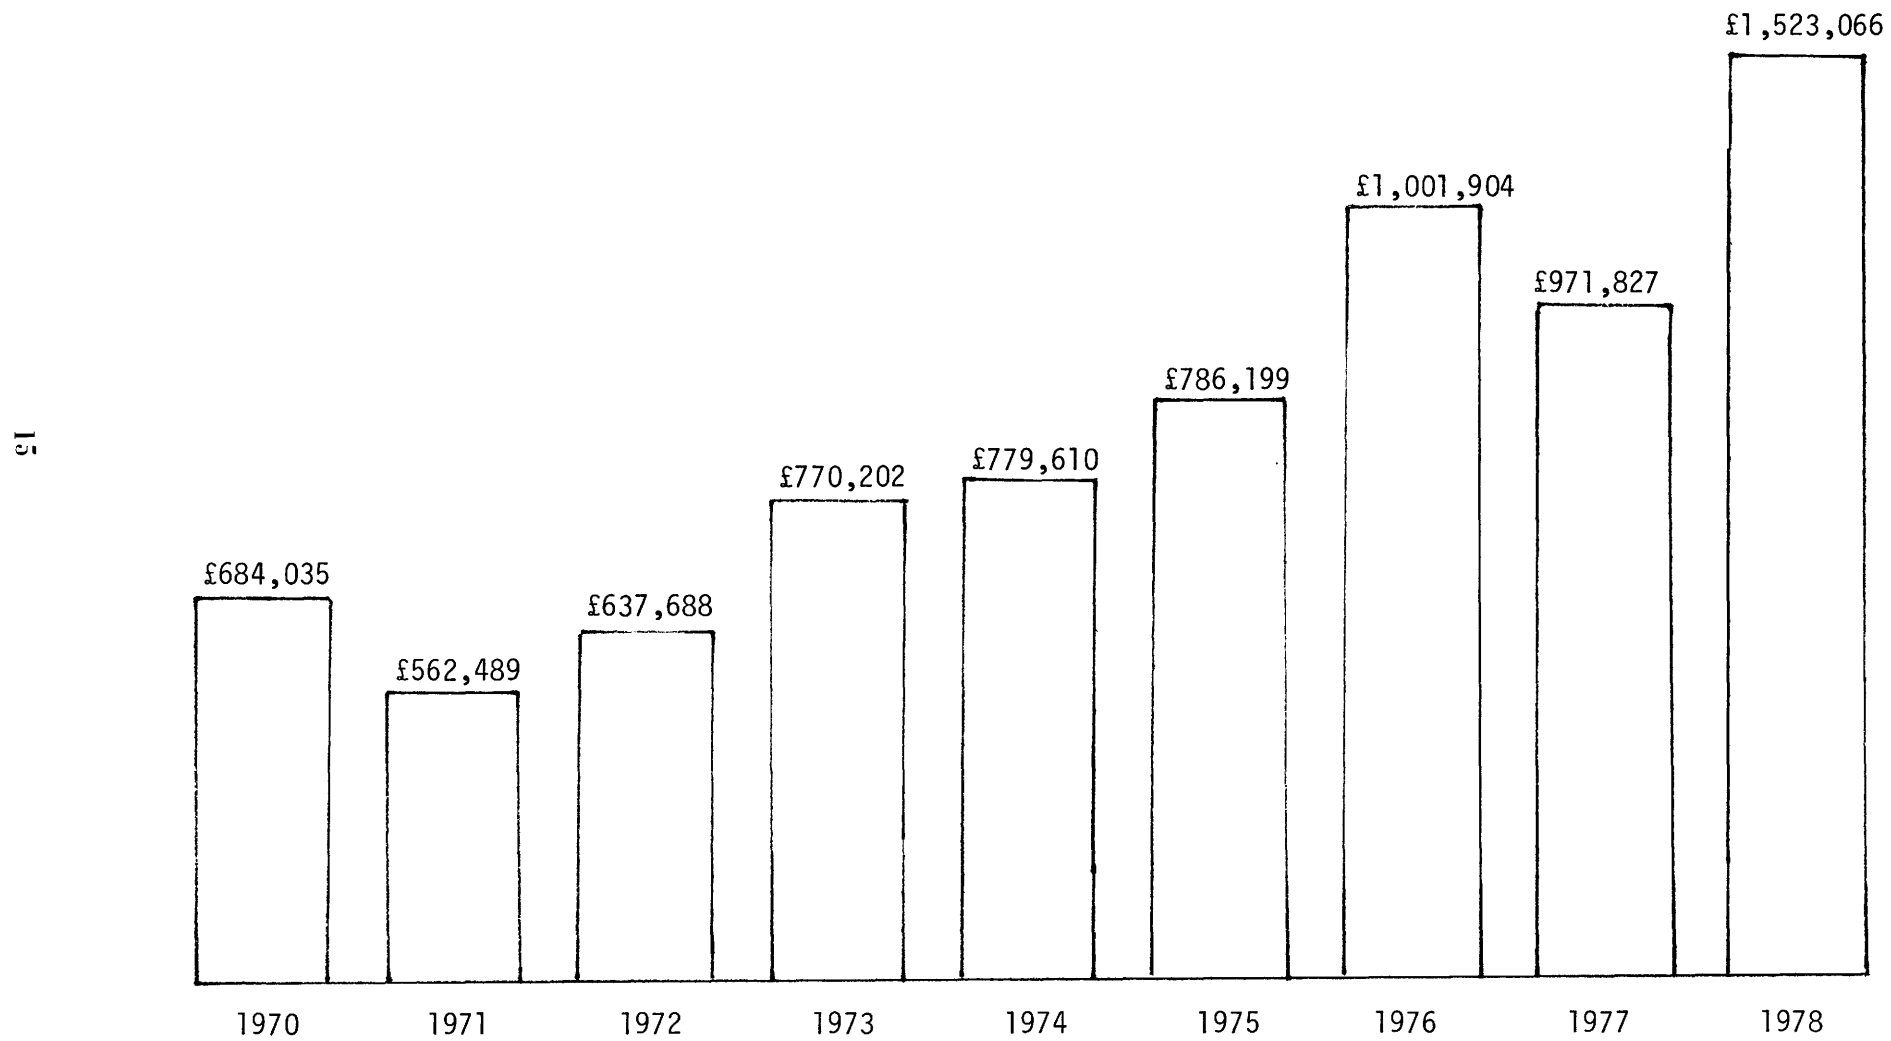

6.3 Export Market

6.3.1 Exports of all records to November 1978 were valued at £1.9 million. Table 7 outlines the pattern of exports in the period 1970/78. A full breakdown of these can be seen in Appendix IV.

6.3.2 The export activity comprised Irish traditionals, folk, popular and instrumental work. No classical records were involved.

7. THE MARKET FOR CLASSICAL RECORDS

7.1 Market Size

- 7.1.1 There is no precise information on the value of the classical records sector of the overall record market. No actual value is stated from any trade institution, organisation or government service. Classical records are not given a separate category at point of entry and are not, therefore, tabulated in the Customs & Excise statistics.
- 7.1.2 Thus, the information gathered has been from trade sources at the three levels of industrial activity: manufacturing/processing, distribution and retailing.
- 7.1.3 It is generally considered by trade sources that the total record market in Ireland is worth about £10 million at retail selling prices. Many of these sources estimate that classical records would account for not more than 5 per cent of the market which would give it a value of £500,000. Taking average retail selling price at about £5.50 per unit, this assumes that about 90,000 classical records are sold annually.
- 7.1.4 An attempt to estimate the size of the market for all records is set out in Table 8.

8. DISTRIBUTION

8.1 Background

8.1.1 In analysing changes in the distribution of classical records it must be emphasised that the latest Census of Distribution in Ireland took place in 1971. More recent information is not available.

8.1.2 In the record industry the distribution chain which operates is:

8.1.3 Despite the level of growth in the record industry in Ireland, the level of change does not appear to have had major significance in the distribution sector. However, some changes which have taken place in the period 1970/78 include:

- (i) the emergence of specialist record shops
- (ii) the development by retailers of new sources of supply
- (iii) an attempt at consolidation by a number of retailers

8.2 Distributors

8.2.1 A list of distributors of all records is shown in Appendix V. Precise information on market share was not available and the distributors concerned declined to discuss the matter which they considered was confidential.

8.2.2 In 1970 there were six main distributors of records, including classical. These were:

EMI

Irish Record Factors

Polydor

Pye

Solomon & Peres

Walton

One of the above, Pye, who distribute the CBS label, has since ceased operations. The Pye label is now distributed by Polygram (formerly Polydor), while CBS has its own distribution network. Walton has been, and still is, identified with traditional Irish works.

- 8.2.3 There were 14 distributors in 1978 which reflects the considerable growth which has taken place during the 1970's. The principal ones are (in alphabetical order):

CBS

EMI

Polygram

Release

Solomon & Peres

- 8.2.4 Of these only Release is not concerned with classical material. Among the others not more than 5 per cent of the company's sales are of classical records.
- 8.2.5 Most companies employ sales representatives to sell records, which are either delivered by the company's own transport, the national transport network or mailed out. It is known that orders of £200 are delivered free.
- 8.2.6 Confusion seems to exist in the minds of most retailers over which label occupies brand leadership. Those connected with the industry at retail level agree unanimously with the fact that Deutsche Grammophon was undeniably brand leader in the classical records segment until recently. Now general opinions suggest that the pattern would be in the following order:

EMI

Decca

CBS

DGG

- 8.2.7 This trend would seem accurate on the evidence of availability within those retail outlets sampled. There is, however, no evidence on which to assess in percentage terms the actual share of any particular brand.
- 8.2.8 There appear to be two reasons for the apparent demise of DGG. Initially, the strength of the Deutsch mark against the pound had an adverse effect on prices at retail level. The other seems to be the reluctance of the distributors, Polygram Ltd., to carry a representative range of classical records in stock. Because the market sector is small relative to the industry as a whole, Polygram (who also distribute the Philips label) has applied a minimum order quantity of 25 for any one work. This has the effect of placing DGG records in short supply as the retail trade is not prepared to carry such stock levels. Consequently retailers are compelled to obtain an alternative label, or buy their supplies from other wholesalers in the UK.

8.3 Retailing

- 8.3.1 There is no breakdown available from official sources of the number of retail outlets selling records. According to the 1971 Census of Distribution there were 630 retail outlets selling television, radio, record players, musical instruments and related supplies which included records. Consequently the base data for an analysis of concentration does not exist.
- 8.3.2 Trade sources have indicated that in 1978 there were about 250 retail outlets selling records, of which 85 were in Dublin. In all, less than a dozen outlets specialise in classicals.
- 8.3.3 Demand is primarily generated by the younger age groups, i.e. 16/20 years and has been increasing at a high level. Trade sources indicate that growth in the industry is running at around 15 per cent per annum, but the main thrust of growth is in the popular music category.
- 8.3.4 This growth saw the emergence of greater numbers of outlets specialising in record sales. Many of the outlets have special audio facilities where prospective customers can evaluate particular records prior to purchase.

Records, including classical works, are also sold in some department stores which have record departments. Records, though not always classical, are also sold through variety stores such as Woolworths, or supermarket chains.

- 8.3.5 Little integration has occurred in the record retailing sector. Some retail chain outlets exist, and are confined to Dublin.

The most notable are:

Golden Discs	13 outlets
Dolphin Discs	10 outlets
Murray Records	6 outlets

- 8.3.6 The expansion achieved by the above firms has been effected by natural growth, rather than any induced by takeover or acquisition. It is believed that each company has pursued a policy of expansion which coincided with that of the record industry. Golden Discs are understood to have opened a new outlet on average of every 12 months since 1971, and Dolphin Discs a branch on average of every 20 months since that date.

- 8.3.7 In 1970 it is understood that the companies concerned operated outlets in the following order:

Golden Discs	5 outlets
Dolphin Discs	5 outlets
Murray Records	2 outlets

- 8.3.8 It has not been possible to ascertain the combined or individual market shares of the firms in question, but the above would represent the recent approach to consolidation by retail groups.

- 8.3.9 The fact that in all but a few retail outlets the level of choice was limited to one or two versions of a particular work was due, according to the retailers concerned, to a reluctance to carry heavy stocks of classical material because of the high VAT rate (see Paragraph 10.3).

- 8.3.10 Because of the difficulties experienced in obtaining regular supplies from some distributors, retailers are known to have obtained supplies from other sources, notably wholesalers in the UK, who may have stocks of a particular work available which can be purchased in small quantities or in single units.

9. PRICING

9.1 Price Lists

The distributors publish a recommended retail price list (see Appendix VII). This is observed by the majority of retailers.

9.2 Discounts

Distributors' prices are believed to be subject to additional discounts understood to be in the region of 10 per cent based on quantities purchased.

9.3 Margins

Mark-up on classical records at retail level averages around 45/50 per cent.

9.4 Settlement Terms

Cash settlement terms are $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent per month; some retailers have obtained $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent on 7 days cash settlement.

10. VALUE ADDED TAX

- 10.1 When a record is imported there is a revenue of 40 per cent paid on the landed cost by the manufacturer/distributor at point of entry. 10 per cent of this is recoverable. The manufacturer/distributor passes on 30 per cent to the retailer, to which is added 10 per cent, making a total of 40 per cent which is paid by the consumer at point of sale.
- 10.2 This tax, which all retailers surveyed consider excessive, is largely responsible for inflating the price of classical records and by inference inhibiting growth in a sector which should have considerable potential, and remain uninfluenced by the fashions, etc. which seem to affect other sectors of the record industry. It also contributes to imposing restraints on inventory by reducing stock levels and, of course, choice of labels to the consumer.
- 10.3 During the course of the survey it was evident that only a handful of retailers carried more than one alternative selection to those itemised in the questionnaire and this may have been attributable to the cost of inventory being inflated by the high VAT rate.
- 10.4 The reason why the VAT rate is considered to be inhibiting the market for classical records is that anybody coming into the country has been permitted, under EEC regulations, to take in £50 worth of merchandise free of tax, which it is understood will be raised to £120. The retail trade alleges that many consumers use this allowance to purchase classical records in the UK where they are notably cheaper.
- 10.5 There is an average retail price differential of 25 per cent on classical records between Ireland and the UK. This figure is based on price comparisons between Irish and UK retail outlets on a random selection of works. The details, which were obtained with the help of the Cranfield School of Management, are set out in Appendix VIII.
- 10.6 It is considered easy for air, sea or car travellers to take records in any quantities. Many distributors and retailers allege a high level of smuggling by individuals seeking to avoid paying VAT on importation. Once in the country these records are sold to the trade at prices considerably lower than would be possible with legally imported goods. Instances of individuals' experiences were cited as proof of the existence of this practice which can distort the market.

- 10.7 While this illegal importation probably exists, we have been unable to quantify it and have found little indication of major damage to the market. The legal importation of records as outlined above probably has considerably greater impact.
- 10.8 A Press comment on VAT by the music critic of the Irish Times is set out in Appendix IX.

11. AGREEMENTS

11.1 The subject of restrictive agreements between manufacturers/distributors and retailers is a sensitive area. Even if any such existed it is highly unlikely that details would be disclosed.

11.2 According to the firms interviewed during the course of the study, no agreements exist between retailers and manufacturers/distributors beyond those concerned with normal commercial relations. Similarly, the latter firmly stated that no agreements of any kind exist between them and retailers.

12. MULTI-NATIONALS

12.1 The fact that no processing of classical records is undertaken in Ireland is indicative of the fact that the market is very small and precludes mass-production for domestic consumption, and that importation from other markets is relatively unrestricted.

12.2 All of the leading companies whose labels are internationally known operate in Ireland through a distributor or their own sales force, i.e. EMI, CBS, Polygram, etc.

13. SUMMARY OF CONCENTRATION TRENDS

- 13.1 There is no manufacturing or processing industry for classical records in Ireland. All classical material is imported.
- 13.2 The record industry in Ireland is of recent origin, and has experienced enormous growth overall. As such rigid structures in the industry have not been established which makes the analysis of concentration trends, for example, difficult to evaluate. This is particularly true of the classical music sector, which is insignificant both by national and international standards.
- 13.3 Notable among the developments which have occurred are:
- The emergence of specialist shops
 - The development by retailers of new sources of supply
 - Attempts at consolidation by some retailers
- 13.4 Classical records tend to be relatively expensive and are restricted to a minority of purchasers. It has not been possible to establish socio-economic groupings, as no information is available.
- 13.5 A lack of up-to-date and meaningful statistical data has impeded efforts to obtain an accurate assessment of the classical records industry in Ireland.

PRESS ARTICLES ON VAT

IRISH TIMES, JANUARY 22, 1979

RECORDS, by Charles Acton - Taxed twice over

The Budget brought matters of interest to gramophone listeners as such. You will recall that at present the Government have a 40% so-called VAT on undesirable luxuries like cars, motorbikes, mopeds, wireless and television sets, gramophones and records. "So-called" because 30 of the 40% is not a VAT at all but something so arranged that it acts as a disguised customs duty and is contrary to the whole essence of VAT. The EEC have at last told the Government to stop this dishonesty, euphemistically and lyingly called "two-tier VAT". Accordingly, the Minister proposed to replace the "first tier" by excise duties, but not to put them on radios and record players because the effect has been and would be even more to encourage their import across the Border.

But what about records? At present a car load of five people can bring in about £500 of records from Northern Ireland under the EEC regulations. I once naively asked one of our major record distributors if this was not a direct incentive for retailers to stock up from the North. He pointed to a map of Ireland on his wall with pins for all the record retailers and said: "Why the hell do you think there are almost more record shops in the Border towns than in the rest of the country?"

It is obviously up to record buyers to lobby their TDs before the appearance of the Finance Bill (and not after it) to see that an impost of 40% is excessive and that, whatever arrangements are made, they should both be honest and be seen to be honest, and should not encourage smuggling or taking a large part of the retail record buying business out of Irish hands; because a lot of the retail business is now going not even to our fellow-countrymen in Northern Ireland but to Britain.

IRISH TIMES, NOVEMBER 29, 1978

Letter to the Editor - Duty on records

A Chara - At the opening of RTE-2 it was interesting to hear Mr Lynch put forward the view that we should not be narrow in our culture, but should welcome the best of international culture. An admirable sentiment, indeed. But how can one reconcile this with the imposition of a 40% duty on anyone who seriously wishes to widen his or her knowledge of music by buying classical records from overseas dealers - mainly English? The 10% duty on books is mean enough, but the 40% on records is grossly unfair and narrow.

It is by no means a question of being unfair to Irish dealers. If a person wants something off the beaten track - Scriabin say, or a Bach cantata - one gets the reply: "We only cater for fast-selling lines as a rule".

Thus we have the situation whereby a 40% duty awaits the classical record, and 10% the book, while special arrangements can be made for drink and tobacco. Of course. "Pap" and "clap-trap", how-are-you. Is mise, le meas.

Micheal S.O'Ceallaigh - Radharc an Bhradain, Corcaigh.

In 1970 the Commission initiated a research programme on the evolution of concentration and competition in several sectors and markets of manufacturing industries in the different Member States (textile, paper, pharmaceutical and photographic products, cycles and motorcycles, agricultural machinery, office machinery, textile machinery, civil engineering equipment, hoisting and handling equipment, electronic and audio equipment, radio and television receivers, domestic electrical appliances, food and drink manufacturing industries).

The aims, criteria and principal results of this research are set out in the following documents:

- 1) "Methodology of concentration analysis applied to the study of industries and markets", by Dr. Remo LINDA, (ref. 8756), (English version), September 1976.
- 2) "Etude sur la concentration, les prix et les marges dans la distribution de produits alimentaires", (French version) :
 - "Tome 1: Concurrence multiple et structure des prix", par Remo LINDA, juin 1978.
 - "Tome 2: Evolution de la concentration et des prix dans la distribution alimentaire en France", par l'IAM de Montpellier (G.GHERSI, M.C. ALLAYA, M. ALLAYA). septembre 1978.

Série évolution de la concentration et de la concurrence, 1978, nn. 8 and B8.

This particular volume constitutes a part of the second series of studies, the main aim of which is to present the results of the research on the evolution of prices and margins for the classical records for Ireland.

Similar volumes concerning the structures of the distributive systems and the evolution of prices and mark-ups have been established also for other Member States.
