THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT: 1984 ELECTION RESULTS

The newly elected European Parliament -- the second to be chosen directly by European voters -- began its five-year term last month with an inaugural session in Strasbourg, France.

The Parliament elected Pierre Pflimlin, a French Christian Democrat, as its new president. Pflimlin, a parliamentarian since 1979, is a former Prime Minister of France and ex-mayor of Strasbourg. He succeeds Pieter Dankert, a Dutch Socialist, who came in second in the presidential vote this time around.

The new assembly quickly exercised one of its major powers -- final say over the European Community budget -- by blocking payment of a 1983 budget rebate to the United Kingdom. The rebate had been approved by Community leaders as part of an overall plan to resolve the E.C.'s financial problems. The Parliament froze the rebate after the U.K. opposed a plan for covering a 1984 budget shortfall during a July Council of Ministers meeting. The issue will be discussed again in September by E.C. institutions.

Garret FitzGerald, Prime Minister of Ireland, outlined for the Parliament the goals of Ireland's six-month presidency of the E.C. Council. He urged the representatives to continue working for a more unified Europe in which "free movement of people and goods" is a reality, and he called for more "intensified common action" to fight unemployment. He said European politicians must work to bolster the public's faith in the E.C., noting that budget problems and inter-governmental "wrangles" have overshadowed the Community's benefits.

Mr. FitzGerald praised the Parliament for regularly expressing a European viewpoint on important international issues.

The new 434-member Parliament was elected in June by citizens of the European Community's 10 member states. The assembly has existed since 1952, but its members were appointed from national parliaments until the first direct elections in 1979.
