

CURRICULUM VITAE

Professor Alexander Chloros is Professor of comparative Law in the University of London and Director of the Center of European Law at King's College London.

He was born in Athens in 1926. After completing his elementary and secondary education in Greece, he registered as a student at the Law School of the University of Athens, where he studied for two years. Subsequently, he graduated in Jurisprudence from the University of Oxford.

In 1951 he became assistant lecturer in law, and in 1954 lecturer in law at the University College of Wales Aberystiryth. In 1959 he became lecturer in law at Kings' College London.

In 1963 he was appointed to a readership in comparative Law and in 1966 to the Chair of comparative Law in the University of London. He obtained the degree of LL.D. of the University of London in 1972. In 1974 he was also appointed concurrently director of the Center of European law at King's College. He has been a Hayter fellow at the Institute of Comparative law of Belgrade. He has also been a visiting professor at the Universities of Paris I, Uppsala, Fribourg and Athens.

He has given courses in a variety of subjects including Comparative European Law and Comparative Commercial Law. After the United Kingdom's accession to the EEC he was the first - jointly with the late professor E.J. Cohn - to teach European Community Law at King's College London. He is also, a well known specialist in Marxist and East European Law. In London he has also taught French law and was responsible for setting up, at King's College, in conjunction with the University of Paris I a dual degree in English and French law.

He has lectured all over Europe and taken part in the work of the Council of Europe and the EEC. He was a member of the Committee that set up the European University Institute in Florence. In 1976 he was elected President of the Conference of European Law faculties under the auspices of the Council of Europe.

He has spent periods overseas on legislative work and has drafted the Civil and the Commercial Code of the Seychelles. He has held upon a regular pace seminars in various European Institutes (e.g. in Luxembourg, Turin, etc.) and is the editor of Volium IV of the International Encyclopedia of Comparative law published by the Max Planck Institute of Hambourg.

Since Greece applied for membership of the European Communities he has been one of the five member TASK FORCE negotiating Greece's entry into the EEC and has been responsible especially for the legal aspects of the negotiations. At present he acts as legal adviser on EEC matters to Minister Contogeorgis, Greek Minister responsible for European Affaires.

Professor Chloros has written extensively for matters of his interest and has received many distinctions. He is an associated member of the International Academy of Comparative Law and corresponding member of the Academy of Athens and Royal Uppsala Academy. He is also a Knight of a Pola Star, (Sweedon) and Officier de Palmes Académiques (France).