Professor John H. Jackson has been selected as General Counsel by Ambassador William D. Eberle, the President's Special Representative for Trade Negotiations. Pending his assumption of those duties, he has been appointed by the Special Representative as consultant to his Office.

In his new position of General Counsel, Jackson will provide legal counsel to the Office of the Special Representative for Trade Negotiations which is responsible for supervising and coordinating most aspects of U. S. foreign trade policy, including trade negotiations.

Mr. Jackson is currently Professor in law at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan. He received an AB degree at Princeton University in 1954, and served in the U. S. Army from 1954-1956. He received his law degree from the University of Michigan in 1959. While a student there, he was an editor of the Michigan Law Review.

Professor Jackson practiced law with a large corporate law firm in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He has been a Professor of Law at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, since 1966 and for many years taught courses in law of international trade and economic relations, as well as corporation law and contract law. In 1968 and '69 Mr. Jackson was a visiting professor of law at the University of Delhi in Delhi, India.

In addition to numerous scholarly publications, he is the author of World Trade and Law of GATT, a 900 page book published by Bobbs-Merrill in 1969, which is currently used in government and research circles. Professor Jackson is a member of the editorial boards of the Journal of World Trade Law published in Geneva and the Journal of Law and Policy in International Business published at Georgetown University.

Professor Jackson is a member of the American Society of International Law, the American Bar Association and the bars of California, Michigan, Wisconsin and Missouri. Jackson is Chairman of the American Bar Association International Law Section's Committee on Tariffs, Customs and the GATT.

Mr. Jackson is married to the former Joan Leland of Florence, Massachusetts and has three daughters.
