SECRETARIAT

2. Approximation of legislation

Brussels
May 1970

INTRODUCTION

This Supplement to the Bulletin of the European Communities follows on from earlier numbers which have been published from time to time since 1965. Like its predecessors, it is designed to give the reader a general picture of what has been done in the field of approximation of legislation. The present number gives details of work undertaken between 1 January 1958, when the Treaty of Rome came into force, and 31 December 1969, when the transitional period came to an end.

As M. von der Groeben, member of the Commission, said in the European Parliament on 27 November 1969, these tables are one of the means employed by the Commission to keep the Parliament informed of the considerable efforts deployed by the Communities to bring legislation in the several Member States closer together.

To facilitate consultation, the measures of approximation are given in two separate tables. The first of these lists the directives adopted with a view to eliminating restrictions on freedom of establishment, freedom to supply services and the free movement of capital. The second lists directives proper and recommendations issued with a view to approximation of legislation; it also includes multilateral conventions whose effect is to unify the law in the Member States, together with decisions, resolutions, opinions and also memoranda and programmes drawn up by the Commission in certain fields which are liable to have an impact on approximation.

Apart from this addition, the content of the tables has been slightly altered. For instance, references to work in progress have been omitted, because the situation is likely to change with developments in the Common Market. On the other hand, the tables still contain references to all measures which have been published in the official gazette of the European Communities, whether definitive enactments or Commission proposals for action by the Council. The references to certain regulations and proposals for regulations given in previous editions have been left out because the effect of regulations is not to approximate Member States' legislation but to create a separate body of Community law directly applicable in the Member States.

A third table on the implementation of directives by the Member States has not been included in this Supplement for technical reasons; it will be published at a later date.
