Introduction

This Supplement to the Bulletin of the European Communities is an attempt to give a comprehensive picture of the measures for the approximation of national laws which were adopted and published by the EEC institutions between 1 January 1972 and 1 January 1975. It follows on from Supplements of a similar nature which have appeared since 1965.¹

In making the list the same criteria were applied as for the 1972 Supplement. Measures for the approximation of the laws are taken to mean all directives, decisions, recommendations and opinions which the EEC institutions have addressed to all Member States and which :

- aimed to ensure that the internal law of each of the Member States contained binding provisions in line with the common rules;
- were not concerned with eliminating restrictions on the free movement of goods, persons, services and capital.

This list does not include regulations, since regulations are directly applicable and only occasionally constitute a common source of law in all the national laws.

The agreements concluded between Member States to attain the objectives of the Treaty have also been regarded as measures for the approximation of national laws. Admittedly such agreements, which do not revise the EEC Treaty, are not strictly speaking Community laws, and the fact that they were drafted and signed within a Community framework does not change this. However, they cannot be disregarded, firstly because of their objectives, and secondly because they can generally only be implemented once an instrument of internal law has been adopted; in this respect they are similar to directives and recommendations.

Directives, decisions, recommendations, opinions and agreements relating to measures for the approximation of the national laws as defined above have been entered on the list not only by reference to the dates on which they were adopted, formulated or ratified but also to the dates on which proposals were transmitted by the Commission to the Council or on which the acts were signed by the contracting parties.

The table also includes amendments to acts adopted before 1 January 1972. The amendments made by the Act concerning the Accession of the three new Member States are however not given.

In addition :

- resolutions, communications, programmes or decisions not specifically addressed to any party are mentioned where they anticipate, prepare or facilitate measures for the approximation of national laws;
- where necessary in order to clarify or amplify the tables, certain exploratory notes have been included.

A table of the Directives on the elimination of restrictions on the right of establishment and freedom to provide services was published in Supplement 9/72. The table is not reproduced in this issue since the Court of Justice of the European Communities has confirmed that Articles 52 and 59 of the EEC Treaty are directly applicable and can be invoked by parties before national courts against any restrictions on the right of establishment and freedom to provide services (Cases 2/74² and 33/74³).

² This Convention has been signed by thirteen States. The date for ratification is 31 December 1976.

¹ The measures for the approximation of the laws which are listed in this chapter cover only part of the acts adopted by the Community under the common transport policy. Most of them are concerned with only one of the objectives of this common policy, namely the harmonization of conditions of competition. They are often linked with regulations. Equality of access to transport occupations and the transport market, another objective of the common transport policy, is dealt with, except in the case of providers of ancillary transport services, by regulations, rather than by directives as is the case for other occupations. They are therefore not given in this chapter nor in the following chapter relating to activities of employed and self-employed persons. However the regulations which the Commission has proposed to the Council include:

Council Regulation on the introduction of common rules relating to:

- admission to the occupation of road haulage operator in national and international transport;
- capacity in national carriage of goods by road; part of this proposal was adopted in Directive No 75/130 (OJ L 48/31, 75) on the establishment of common rules for certain types of road/rail carriage of goods between Member States.

¹ Since 1969 on the basis of the four Directives on fodder seed plant, cereal seed, forest reproductive materials and seed of oil and fibre plants, the Commission has adopted about thirty decisions temporarily authorizing one or more or even all the Member States to derogate from these Directives in respect of certain seeds or plants. The dates and OJ references for all these secondary decisions cannot be given without overloading the table. The reader can easily find them by consulting the tables in the OJ relating to 1969 and the following years.
